

Join
Renew
Donate

FEDERATION OF FLY FISHERS™

Conserving · Restoring · Educating · Through Fly Fishing

Home	Conservation	Education	Conclave	Instructor Certification	Fly Fishing
Merchandise	Fly Tying
About Us	Membership	Support Us	Councils and Clubs	Events Calendar	Awards
Volunteer	Contact Us	Site Map

Home >> About Us >> Angling Code of Ethics >> English

Code of Ethics

Federation of Fly Fishers Code of Angling Ethics

German - Siehe deutsche Übersetzung an Italian - La veduta Traduzione italiana
French - La vue Traduction française
Spanish - La vista la Traducción española
Portuguese - A vista Tradução portuguesa

Dear Friend of Fly Fishing:

The Federation of Fly Fishers (FFF) has just adopted an Anglers Code of Ethics. Because of its universal application, we made translations with the hope that we might encourage individuals, clubs, associations, and industry to adopt it and thereby join in our efforts to make the world of fly fishing a better place. The FFF with members, affiliates, and partners in over 40 countries functions as the voice of all that enjoy our sport. Feel free to copy it but please retain our copyright notice.

Marty Seldon
FFF International Relations Committee

The mission of the Federation of Fly Fishers is to lead activities that enhance and support the fly fishing experience for all anglers who fish with the artificial fly. As part of our efforts to educate through fly fishing, we believe that ethical behavior is a key component of the angling experience. While the need to preserve for all anglers the natural beauty and quality of fisheries for future generations is paramount, consideration for fellow anglers cannot be overlooked.

FFF believes it essential that fly anglers in all waters embrace an ethic that embodies consideration for the environment and for others whether they are fishing or not. This Code of Angling Ethics complements the Catch and Release philosophy that is the hallmark of the Federation of Fly Fishers and reflects the importance of ethical behavior for all anglers. Moreover, it provides a framework for improving the angling experience by combining consideration of the fishery with respectful conduct towards fellow anglers. Overall, the policy denotes a journey in ethical behavior for fly anglers and not a destination.

Person-to-person and person-to-resource ethics go hand-in-hand. Fly anglers strive to understand and practice the land ethic of Aldo Leopold, which extends ethical consideration to the land, plants, animals, fish, and water that comprise the entire ecosystem. An important part of this land ethic is that fly anglers support those programs that sustain high species diversity, and do not support policies that could cause the premature extinction of another species. The Native Fish Policy of the Federation of Fly Fishers is based on this ethic of preventing fish species extinction.

The following nine behaviors comprise the Federation of Fly Fishers' Code of Angling Ethics:

- Angling ethics begin with understanding and obeying laws and regulations associated with the fishery. Fly anglers understand that their conduct relative to laws and regulations reflects on all anglers. Angling ethics begin with and transcend laws and regulations governing angling and the resources that sustain the sport.
- The opportunity to participate in the sport of fly fishing is a privilege and a responsibility. Fly anglers respect private property and always ask permission before entering or fishing private property. They seek to understand and follow the local customs and practices associated with the fishery. They share the waters equally with others whether they are fishing or engaging in other outdoor activities.
- Fly fishers minimize their impact on the environment and fishery by adopting practices that do not degrade the quality of the banks, waters, and the overall watersheds upon which fisheries depend. These practices include avoiding the introduction of species not native to an ecosystem, and cleaning and drying fishing gear to prevent the inadvertent transport of invasive exotics that may threaten the integrity of an aquatic ecosystem. In simplest terms, fly anglers always leave the fishery better than when they found it.

Privacy Statement :: Terms Of Use

Federation of Fly Fishers - 215 East Lewis St, Livingston MT 59047. 406-222-9369 Copyright 2008

